Manual for College Improvement Advisors

Welcome to the T-TEL Leadership Programme Resources for Leaders in Colleges of Education

Transforming Teacher Education and Learning (T-TEL) is a Government of Ghana programme to support the implementation of the new policy framework for Pre-Tertiary Teacher Professional Development and Management. T-TEL seeks to transform the delivery of pre-service teacher education in Ghana by improving the quality of teaching and learning through support to relevant national bodies and institutions and all Colleges of Education (CoE).

Elements of the programme will include:

- professional development for all CoE tutors (including tutors in mathematics, English and science);
- support for the leadership and management of CoEs and training of their leadership and management teams;
- support to reform the Diploma in Basic Education (DBE) curriculum;
- support to develop more effective student practicums;
- work with MoE and regulatory bodies on the implementation of existing policies for teacher education;
- a Challenge Fund to which CoEs and their partner districts and schools will be able to apply to carry out innovative initiatives; and
- a set of incentives for each CoE to improve their management and training delivery.

The role of leaders of educational institutions in securing quality provision and ensuring that all learners achieve their full potential is both a professional responsibility and a moral obligation. Whilst the quality of teaching and learning is considered a major contributory factor to positive learning outcomes, there is growing evidence about the positive relationship between effective leadership and continuous improvement in schools and colleges in many countries. The Leadership component of the T-TEL programme seeks to focus on the improvement of management, leadership and governance of Colleges of Education as they develop their capacity as autonomous tertiary education institutions.

As the primary decision-making authority in the college, it is critical that college principals and their leadership teams take initiative in building classrooms which are student-friendly as well as inspire and motivate tutors to develop their professional capacities. In transforming these colleges, it is also imperative that management and administration and most importantly leadership are effectively strengthened to ensure changes are embedded in everyday practice.

The College Improvement Advisors (CIAs) working in collaboration with the Programme Component Lead, are to support college leaders in their journey towards transforming the colleges in order to gain autonomy as tertiary educational institutions. The CIAs facilitate the delivery of the Leadership Programme through zonal workshops held each semester.

The Leadership Programme for college leaders is organised into six units around four domains of institutional leadership with a clear focus on professional development and quality assurance, such as Leading Institutional Strengthening (Systems and Operations Leadership), Curriculum, Training and Learning Leadership, Change Leadership and Strategic Leadership. There are about six different carefully selected topics within each unit to ensure that college leaders are equipped with the necessary skills to lead their colleges to autonomous tertiary institutions. Imbedded in each unit is the self-assessment of seven quality assurance indicators of Leadership and Management, Training and Learning, Assessment, Student Engagement, Monitoring and Evaluation, Environment and Infrastructure and Partnership and Cooperation. The Leadership Programme resources provide a step-by-step guide on assessing the indicators against specific themes and evidence. Further information on the professional development units and quality assurance indicators is available in the appendix of this book.

The resources are self-contained and could be used for self-study. However, since college and school improvement is mostly accelerated through a collegiate approach, the Leadership Programme resources are developed to encourage and ensure a collaborative working between senior leaders, middle leaders and college community. The aim is to build a culture of distributed and transformative leadership practices within each college.

The leadership materials are presented and printed in the respective units, but are also available online at www.t-tel.org in various formats such as HTML, ePub and PDF. All T-TEL resources are Open Educational Resources (OER), available under a Creative Commons Attribution ShareAlike licence. 1.1 OVERVIEW OF THE T-TEL LEADERSHIP PROGRAMME

The role of leaders of educational institutions in securing quality provision and ensuring that all learners achieve their full potential is both a professional responsibility and a moral obligation.

Whilst the quality of teaching and learning is considered a major contributory factor to positive learning outcomes, there is growing evidence in the literature about the positive relationship between effective leadership and continuous improvement in schools and Colleges in many countries. 2.0 Introduction

Your role as College Improvement Adviser (CIA) on the T-TEL programme is essential in supporting college leaders plan and implement the strategies necessary for strengthening their institutions and becoming autonomous. This manual is therefore intended to be your guide in the performance of your role as CIA. It sets out your responsibilities, protocols to follow in discharging your duties and the various templates that you are to use.

2.1 THE COLLEGE IMPROVEMENT ADVISOR (CIA)

We will ensure all CIAs visiting any College are well qualified and have undergone the necessary training to carry out the task as a CIA and can provide adequate support. Primarily, your role as a CIA is to assist Cambridge Education, United Kingdom in implementing the T-TEL programme. A CIA is the first line of support for the leadership teams in the Colleges of Education as they plan and implement their programme to raise standards in training and learning, quality assurance and institutional governance. The expectation is that through your continuous support, intervention and challenge, college leaders will be able to improve both their practice and effectiveness.

You are a coach, materials developer, trainer and reviewer for the T-TEL Leadership and Management programme.

2.2. THE ROLE OF COACHING ON THE T-TEL LEADERSHIP PROGRAMME

Coaching teaches us to monitor our progress and change direction when necessary. As we reach milestones on the way we need to take time to celebrate our success. The key to it all is action, continuous and deliberate action.

(Grant, A.M. and Greene, J. Coach Yourself – make real change in your life, Pearson Education Ltd (2001), p.18.

Coaching is essential in helping college leaders to deepen their understanding of the learning provided for them during the training workshop and implement the changes needed to bring improvement to their practice and to students' outcomes. The coach's role is to inspire self-directed change and support the professional development of college leaders. Underpinning this however must be the desire of the college leaders to make significant changes and strengthen their colleges as autonomous tertiary institutions.

The T-TEL leadership coaching emphasises the need to build trust and rapport between the College Improvement Advisors (CIAs), the College Improvement Partners (CIPs) and the college leadership. It further requires the development of a demonstrable level of skills in questioning, reflection and listening from all the CIAs, CIPs and the college leadership. The expectation is to support colleges to take action to implement targets and activities emanating from each coaching session.

2.2.1 The CIA as a Coach

As a coach, you will be expected to facilitate comprehension, direction and action. You should see your role not as someone who fixes the problems of the college but rather, one who provides appropriate challenges that draw on the expertise of the college leaders. This means that you should assume the role of critical friend rather than expert. You are to help the college leaders to move their improvement agenda forward and focus their activities on impactful outcomes and results. You will find Starr's (2010) seven common principles provide a useful guide for your work as a coach:

- Clear commitment to support the college and the leadership.
- Establish your relationship with the college leaders on trust, openness and truth.
- The college leaders are responsible for the emerging outcomes.
- The college leaders are capable of doing and achieving more than they are currently.
- College leaders' experiences and thoughts are essential and important, and should be considered.
- College leaders can generate perfect solutions to their challenges, hence you are a guide and facilitator.
- Equality is key, hence your conversation with the college leaders should be done with the principle of equality in mind.

We also recommend the GROW coaching model

GOALS: What does T-TEL want the colleges to achieve and how do the colleges feel about it now and afterwards?

REALITY: What are the problems, the context and the scenario? What cases have emerged and how have they been handled?

OPTIONS: What are the possible actions? Which are the most attractive? What has worked in the past?

WRAP-UP: What actions are needed? What are the success criteria? What should be the alternative if things do not go well?

The main part of your coaching role is to support the colleges in your zone to undertake self-assessment of their institution and then develop an improvement plan. Further coaching sessions will focus on regular self-assessment and ultimately final evaluation of the quality and impact of their leadership practice on quality provision of the college. It is essential that in your coaching role, you facilitate the development of the kind of effective college leadership that is needed to run an autonomous tertiary institution.

The other aspects of coaching role are:

- Change management, strategic planning, systems and operations leadership, curriculum, learning and training leadership and governance.
- The effective management of college resources including human and finance, and the institutionalisation of robust performance management regime and quality assurance systems are critical to coaching role.

2.2.2 The CIA as materials developer

An interesting aspect of your role as a college improvement partner is your involvement in the development of training materials for the leadership programme. As an expert in the field, you need to take ownership of the content of the materials needed to equip college leaders to confidently provide the leadership that their colleges need.

The materials for the programme will be developed in two phases. The first phase is scheduled for December 2015 over 15 days and the second phase starts in June to August 2016 over 30 days. While phase 1 will focus on units 2 and 3, the focus for phase 2 is units 4, 5 and 6 [see Appendix A for a detailed unit outline].

2.2.3 CIA as a Trainer

In addition to being a coach and materials developer, you are also a trainer. The college leaders will be trained so that they can effectively plan and implement all the strategies you will share with them in the coaching sessions. The training workshops will be held in each Zone [but for the purpose of the training, the zones have been divided into six] with the CIAs assigned to the zones taking a facilitation role. In total there will be six workshops over the life of the T-TEL project with each workshop clearly tailor-made with specific objectives and deliverables in mind. These deliverables include: undertaking college self-assessment, creating and communicating a vision for each of your colleges, developing a college improvement plan, policy formulation, quality assurance and internal controls.

- It is expected that college leaders will be able to replicate the training that you have given them to other members of their college community.
- It is also expected that clear next steps will be agreed with the college leaders at the end of each training workshop.

2.2.4 CIA as a Monitor and Reviewer

Effective monitoring of leadership practices within the college and regular review of improvement plans are important college leadership characteristics that need to be embedded into the culture of the college. The CIA is expected to model this behaviour to the senior leadership team in each college and to ensure that these teams are able to replicate this practice to middle level leaders in their colleges. The involvement of everyone in monitoring and reviewing will create a ripple effect and develop a pool of reflective practitioners who are able to take ownership of their own practices.

You are expected to visit the colleges in your zone for the purpose of monitoring and reviewing leadership practices as indicated in their improvement plan and produce reports on the same. The outcome of your monitoring and review visit in addition to key action points from each zonal training workshop will form the basis for your coaching of college leaders.

Manual for College Improvement Advisors

3.0 Coaching and Monitoring Visits

College visits to provide support, to coach and monitor the college leaders and their practice are an important part of your role as a CIA. Such visits should be well planned within the CIA visits and activities framework; it is important that you clearly communicate this to the principals and other college leaders. The framework is included in this manual, which highlights the length, frequency and number of visits to be undertaken by the CIAs.

3.0.1 LENGTH OF VISIT

Each CIA visit will be two days at a time. The time spent at any college will depend on the planned deliverables for the CIA and the nature of engagement with the stakeholders he/she will be working with during the visit.

3.0.2 FREQUENCY OF VISITS

As a CIA you will be visiting the colleges in your zone or area twice per semester during the project cycle (that is the three-year period). These visits will take place during the term time. If needed and with the consent of the college principal, CIAs are free to arrange additional visits. The T-TEL Key Advisor should be kept informed in advance of any potential bottlenecks to the agreed frequency of visits.

3.1 PREPARATION FOR CIA VISIT

It is expected that CIAs will develop a visiting schedule and the focus for each visit which should include coaching, support and monitoring with each college in their zone. This plan should be shared with the T-TEL Key Advisor for his approval before implementation.

The first visit in the whole process should support the colleges in undertaking the self-assessment of the key quality indicators, and the development of their college improvement plan. The CIA should ensure that all pro-forma and template are readily available for completion prior to the visit.

3.2 EXPECTATIONS OF COLLEGES

For the CIAs to do their work effectively the colleges will expect their CIA to maintain professional standards and high codes of practice. It is important to remember that your role is to support, coach and to assist the colleges to achieve all the T-TEL expected project outcomes by the end of the project cycle.

It is expected that CIA and Colleges will:

- treat each other and those involved in their work with respect;
- do their work in an open and friendly manner;
- be polite when demanding information or engaging any staff when asking for support;
- work with little disruption of academic work of the college;
- discuss any concerns appropriately and professionally; and
- maintain a good dialogue with the college leaders, students and any other individual who will be directly involved.

3.3 DURING THE VISIT

The primary point of contact for you as a CIA is the College Principal. You will undertake two visits per semester. During the initial visit, you will need to:

- engage staff and those in leadership and management positions as well as those in governance in dialogue on key aspects of their work;
- do a college walkabout with the principal to get a feel of the college infrastructure, facilities etc., and any improvement(s) needed;
- observe procedures in the college, e.g. staff meetings, senior management meetings, council meetings, students assemblies or any other relevant gathering where good data can be obtained; and
- review management policies and procedures to ensure that they are appropriate and gender responsive.

In subsequent visits your focus will be on monitoring:

- gathering data, looking at records and any other relevant documentary evidence against the quality indicators for improvement;
- ensuring that colleges are meeting their development and improvement plan targets based on the seven indicators or thematic areas, namely:
 1. Leadership and management
 2. Quality training and learning
 3. Assessment
 4. Student engagement
 5. Monitoring and evaluation
 6. College environment and infrastructure
 7. Partnerships and cooperation

You will need to carry out a careful assessment and review of any progress and achievement made by the colleges against those indicators. Each has a specific focus and evidence will need to be generated to support any claim of attainment. Evidence generated will help you to identify any strengths and weaknesses of college self-assessment outcomes.

3.4 BALANCING CHALLENGE AND SUPPORT

Balancing the challenges that you highlight with the support that you provide to the college of education will not be an easy task. The mode of assessment will enable you to identify the strengths and weaknesses of your colleges. As CIA your role will be to support the college in the area that you have both identified as needing to be strengthened and provide the support the college needs in order to enhance its performance.

It is important to remember that you are playing an advisory and supporting role. You are not there to criticise what the colleges do, but to assist them to improve upon their work. The challenge is how to maintain this balance so as to gain maximum support that will enable colleges improve upon their work.

4.0 Appendices

The Colleges Review Toolkit will be made available to you. It contains templates of how each college will have to be assessed. It also has some sample improvement plans that will guide you in your work; although some colleges may have their own improvement plan template.

4.1 TEMPLATES

4.1.1 Coaching Log CIA/Principal

A coaching log attached to this document is suggested to help you structure your conversation with the principals and other college leaders. CIAs must keep proper records of any coaching received; from a CIP, senior management member or any T-TEL project officers. The type of coaching and activities must be properly documented.

In using the log, the use of staff names and words that will enable someone to easily identify an individual in question should be avoided. In addition, please avoid dominating discussions and always remember you are a supportive critical friend to the college leadership.

4.1.2 Monitoring Log CIA

Every CIA must maintain a record of every visit, the type of people he/she engages, activities undertaken and the nature data gathered. It must be very explicit, detailing the type of data gathered and those involved in the data gathering.

4.1.3 College Self-assessment

Self-assessment is a systematic and critical analysis carried out by the educational institution itself to check the extent to which it is providing quality. CIAs must ensure that the colleges have tools that help in the process of internal quality assurance. These must be carried out against a number of agreed areas for review and their key performance indicators [KPIs]. These help to identify strengths and establish areas of weakness that may need improvements.

There are two basic reasons for carrying out an institutional self-assessment. To:

1. Recognise the key strengths of the college
2. Identify priority areas for improvement

4.1.4 College Improvement Plan

As a CIA there are steps to follow when assessing Colleges' Improvement Plans. Many colleges will have already been involved in the development of a long-term [three to five years] development plan and will have identified areas for improvement. Your job as a CIA is to assess the themes and indicators of an improvement plan of a particular college - if the plan will or is helping the college to make improvement. The themes provided in Appendix B and the indicators in Appendix F will help you understand the elements of the improvement plan being used and whether it shows the necessary tools to enable them to make progress.

4.1.5 Reports

Reporting is one of key channels through which all stakeholders are accurately informed about the work that is being done to support the colleges in their journey to autonomy. Therefore, all CIAs must submit their visiting report to the College Improvement Specialist and the Leadership and Management Key Adviser each time they visit a college. The report must be submitted within two weeks after a visit has been made using the template provided in this manual (Appendix H). In addition, for each quarter you are to submit a report of progress you have made to date, issues and key strategies you have identify for your next steps using the template in Appendix K. Other reports that you are to submit are listed in your Key Performance on page... section 4.5 to include mid-year and yearly evaluation reports.

4.2 LEADERSHIP STRUCTURE AND RESPONSIBILITIES

CIAs must ensure that they are familiar with the leadership structure in the colleges and have a better understanding of their system of governance before gathering any leadership and management data or before making any judgement. They should obtain adequate information about those who have leadership and management responsibilities. CIAs must base their assessment on:

- College policies and processes and the support given to students and staff in academic and practice settings.
- Student-support services: for example, a student union, counselling and mentoring support.
- Staff qualifications and experience: the extent to which these match their roles and responsibilities and whether promotion is based on merits and no other reason.
- Student raising and escalating concerns policy.
- Staff raising and escalating concerns policy.
- Staff Development: the extent to which staff are supported through an excellent staff development programme that promotes higher qualifications and improvement and that has a good policy framework to support this.
- Research and scholarship policy.

4.3 ETHICAL CONSIDERATIONS/PROTOCOL

CIAs are expected to exhibit high ethical and professional standards in their work by ensuring that information they gather remain confidential and only used for the T-TEL project. CIAs are not supposed to disclose the names of individuals they may engage in their work – be it formal interviews or informal discussions. Their names must not be disclosed to any third party. To avoid any element of victimisation or reprimands these ethical considerations must be followed.

Information being gathered must be done in a high degree honesty and sincerity; while ensuring that every judgment made is always fair. CIAs must ensure that all protocols are observed at all times.

4.4 QUALITY ASSURANCE

It is the responsibility of the CIA to ensure that information they gather is robust, reliable and well secured and within ethical guidelines.

Quality Assurance is a systematic process to check performance against expected standards. These standards may relate to the quality of training and learning, governance, the effectiveness of management or to the resources available for improvement. Therefore, CIAs will gather information on student experience, teaching and learning, leadership and management as well as the academic standards in the college. CIAs must assess the performance of the colleges they visit based on the following indicators:

- Clear quality assurance policies and procedures.
- The quality of training and learning, nature of governance, the effectiveness of management and resources available to support improvement.
- Compliance of their practices to the statutory and legal framework for Colleges of Education.
- Evidence that College of Education graduates are adequately prepared to contribute to the improvement of education in Ghana.
- College assessment regulations, procedures and criteria are publicly made available and are consistently applied.
- Evidence of approval for the curriculum, and a periodic monitoring and evaluation schedule to maintain the quality of training and learning.
- Adequate resources available to support teaching and learning.
- Good recruitment and a professional development policy that ensures that staff are of high calibre and can deliver the curriculum to the trainees.
- Effective monitoring and evaluation structures that ensure there is a systematic collection, analysis and use of relevant information (both qualitative and quantitative) to support effective management.

4.5 KEY PERFORMANCE INDICATORS [KPI]

The Colleges of Education are to strengthen their institutions and become autonomous tertiary institutions. The Leadership Programme is to support the college leaders in achieving this objective. Your role is to develop training materials and to train, support and monitor college leaders in their journey towards full autonomy. Your performance will therefore be measured against the following indicators:

- Effective facilitation of zonal training workshops for college leaders.
- Planned Coaching events in all colleges.
- Self-assessment of Quality Indicators by all colleges.
- Development of Annual Improvement Plan/s by all colleges.
- Development of Key Policies by all colleges.

APPENDIX A - LEADERSHIP AND MANAGEMENT UNITS

Introduction

A set of six units within the leadership module, and the quality assurance framework supporting the units, are laid out below. These units support the four domains of institutional leadership, as illustrated in the 'Leadership and Management of Colleges Strategy' document. The domains and the corresponding units, along with the proposed delivery dates, are planned as follows:

Domain 1 Leading Institutional Strengthening
Unit 1	Setting New Directions	October 2015
Unit 2	Leading Institutional Development – Systems Leadership	February 2016
Unit 3	Leading Institutional Development – Operations Leadership	September 2016
Domain 2 Curriculum Training and Learning Leadership
Unit 4	Leading Curriculum Training and Learning	February 2017
Domain 3 Change Leadership
Unit 5	Leading and Managing Change	September 2017
Domain 4 Strategic Leadership
Unit 6	Strategic Leadership (Leading Development Planning)	February 2018

The units will be facilitated over a three year period. Each of the 38 Colleges of Education (CoE) will send a team to each training session. The six person team will be made up of the Council Chair or their representative, the college principal and vice principal, a member of the academic board who is preferably also a head of department, the quality assurance officer, and the college secretary or finance officer.

This sub-component of the T-TEL programmes seeks to:

- Focus on the improvement of management, leadership and governance of CoE as they develop their capacity as autonomy tertiary education institutions.
- Support CoE leadership teams in creating a college environment which is able to drive and engender conditions in which tutors are inspired and able to use improved methods of training student teachers, with consequent positive impact on teaching and learning in schools.
- Support CoE leadership in adopting and integrating gender responsive management practices across their institutions.

Manual for College Improvement Advisors

The units are supported by quality assurance standards which have been agreed with National Council for Tertiary Education (NCTE) and the National Accreditation Board (NAB). These standards, with the minimum evidence which the CoEs' are expected to present, are the basis for the CoEs' to become autonomous tertiary institutions. These quality assurance standards and minimum evidence levels are presented at the end of this document.

Objectives

By the end of the course CoEs should have improved with:

- The application of professional development practices and in management and leadership and the impact of those practices across each college.
- CoE management teams leading and creating a conducive environment for teacher professional development and school partnerships.
- Performance targets and an evidence-based College Development Plan.
- Embedding the quality assurance framework, self-assessment processes and reporting in the improvement culture of the college.
- Inclusive gender responsive policies.
- Effective governance and oversight of the college's practices.

UNIT 1: Setting New Directions

By the end of this unit the participants should be able to:
 Conduct a whole college evaluation by:

- Using templates to conduct self-assessments at the various levels in the College.
- Developing a quality improvement plan by using templates provided.
- Defining the main systems of an effective College planning process.
- Engaging all the college stakeholders to develop improvement plans.
- Monitoring progress.

- Ensure CoE practices comply with legal, regulatory, ethical and social requirements.
- Develop an accountability framework.
- Develop a systematic approach to managing an area of work.
- Identify levels of the external environment.
